From Print CEO By Patrick Henry,

It began six years ago in a borrowed conference room with a blank sheet of paper and a cash balance of zero.

It culminated last night in the theatre of the Hearst Tower in New York City with the award of nearly $48,000 in scholarships to college and college-bound students of the graphic arts.

The Graphic Communications Scholarship Award and Career Advancement Foundation, a grassroots campaign on behalf of education, has given about $400,000 in stipends to almost 200 students since the awards were first presented in 2003.

Scholarship winners are chosen annually by a judging panel that reviews applicants' SAT scores, samples, and essays on their plans for careers in graphics. The students honored last night are enrolled or have been accepted for enrollment in graphic studies programs at some of the nation's most prestigious colleges and universities, including the Rhode Island School of Design, The School of the Art Institute of Chicago, Parsons School of Design, and the University of Pennsylvania.

The Founders

The scholarship program is the creation of six people—John Aaron, Mark Darlow, William Dirzulaitis, Steve Kennedy, Jack Kott, and Linda Nahum—who formed an impromptu committee in 2002 to coordinate sources of funds for students in the NYC-metro area. The group initially had no money of its own and kept longhand records of its first attempts at fundraising. A Manhattan printing firm provided the meeting space, but everything else came from the personal efforts of the volunteers.

Over time, the group became a 501(c)3 not-for-profit corporation and the administrator of several pools of scholarship money that had been dormant for lack of active management. It also became a conduit for various scholarships established by printing groups and clubs in the metro area. The foundation continued to pursue its own fund drive, and today its corporate contributors include Hearst Magazines, Agfa, Apple, Kodak, Quark, Pantone, Xerox and other high-profile vendors to the graphics industry.

In 2005 the Foundation established The Graphic Arts Scholarship Foundation—Parsons Academy Scholars Program in which two High School students are funded for three years to attend art classes at the Parsons Academy. The Foundation pays tuition, art supplies, metrocards and provide for their lunch. I arrange for a mentor, remedial tutoring in Math and English and SAT Prep classes.

Addendum September 2009: The two current Graphic Arts Scholarship Foundation Parsons Scholars have received fully-paid scholarships to the Parsons BFA Program as freshmen starting Fall 2009.

Addendum April 2013: Through this important program lead by Foundation member Steve Kennedy, high school scholars are exposed to the rigors of studying design on the college level and career choices in the field of design; scholars develop the skills necessary to gain access to higher education in art and design. For three years we commit to cover the cost of tuition, art supplies, metro cards and lunches. Students commit to come to Parsons every Saturday to attend classes and tutoring for their SAT tests. The scholars take field trips to artist studios and Museum exhibitions. 100% of our students have been accepted to major art colleges and universities.
